IT WAS A FIRST NIGHT.

"Mr. Barnes of New York" Opens the Season.

THE PLAY VERY CLEVERLY GIVEN.

Miss Rigi Makes Some Observations on Topeks and Other Hatters.

The audience at the Grand last night to see Emily Rigl in "Mr. Barnes of New York" was a fairly large and fairly fash-

In "Mr. Barnes of New York," Mr. Gunter has given to the world a story of strong and strange, not to say wierd, dramatic interest—a story with possibilities in every part for the right people.

Marina Paoli is a strong part and Miss Rigl does it better than any other star perhaps could do so difficult a role. She provided the part in New York area. created the part in New York city, and while she has not played it continuously since, it is considered her strongest. It is a portrayal of the wild passionate love that belongs; o Corsican life, hampered by her worship of the ven-detta. In the fourth act her struggle be-tween her love for Austruther and the power of her oath to kill the murderer of her brother was splendidly done. She was handicapped greatly in her work last night by her Anstruther and it is perhaps only just to Manager Moore to say that Mr. Clark, the original Anstruther, is in New York city attending the funeral of his child and the part is at present being handled by an under-

Mrs. May Haynes-Moore who plays Enid Anstruther, the English girl, is the wife of Manager Moore and while she is only tweety years of age was quite as popular with the audience as anyone on the stage. She does her work freely and easily and the audience likes her from the first appearance.

Mr. Hackett as "Barnes," had no trouble in getting into touch with his audience and holding their favor. There is a dash about him that Mr. Gunter evidently intended the character to have and the comedy of the piece depends largely on his work. In the Mateo, Mr. P. L. Fontaine, the company had a good man. His work in the last act was exceptionally good.

The prettiest piece of work the audience saw during the evening was the railway trip from Paris to Nice in four scenes. This is the place in which Miss Anstruther distinguishes horself, in which Mr. Barnes introduces some clever bits of legitimate comedy. They secured an encore. The scenery in this was correct to a nicety.

Mr. Charles Lamb as Tomasso, E. W. Morrison as Antonio Paoli and Charles Hayne as the railway guard were good in their respective parts. The stage management seemed to have a good deal of trouble with the gas last night and the audience noticed it. In addition to this when the curtain arose on the third act the audience was greeted with a cloud of dust, presumably from the stage carpet.

Mr. and Mrs. D. O. McCray and friends constituted the only box party.

GOSSIP OF THE GREEN ROOM. Miss Rigt Not a Politician Nor She

Doesn't "Sit on Ze Fence." Miss Emily Rigl, who is at the Grand just at present as Marius Paoli in "Mr. Barnes of New York," is a woman of strong personality off as well as on the In fact her every day life is very emoved so far as her mannerisms are concerned, from the life you see her picture on the stage. That accent that seems so wonderful is not so wonderful after all, when you have met her and learned that it is very natural with her. Miss Rigl was born in Venice, and although she has been in America at different times for years her accent still clings to her.

A Journal reporter who visited her on the stage last evening during the per-formance found her a very charming and very talkative woman. Miss Rigi is one of the proprietors of the company, the other two being Mr. Moore and Mr. Horace Lewis, the stage director.

Miss Rigl is as Venetian in her manner as in her speech, though she seems to have acquired a good deal of the ways of the French during her residence in Paris. That peculiar French shrug of the shoulders is there, the expressive motions of the lips, the clasping and unclasping of the hands that has so much to do with the French conversation. "You are used to dressing rooms? You will not mind zis one," she said, "Ze dressing rooms in ze west are terrible. Zey are much slike. You see zey put a star on ze door here, so we make no mistake. Seef Zis is better zan lots of ze dressing rooms we have. Zey are all pretty hard-on dresses." The walls and tables and trunks were covered with dresses-rich ones. "I like zis town. It is such a pretty place. We were late here zis afternoon, *Leave Topeks... | Yla Meriden and | 7:30 s.m | but we saw some of it. It is so clean and za streets are so broad. Mrs. Moore and myself went out zis afternoon and and myself went out zis afternoon and took ze mineral baths. We were going *Leave Leavenworth, via Oskaleosa... 4.52 p.m took ze mineral baths. We were going to ze races, but zey told us ze races were accommodation, daily ex. Sunday. not much good today, so we will go tomorrow."

In speaking of the performance last night Miss Rigi said: "Did you not no-tice I am so handicapped. Poor Mr. Wilson, he is such a nice man, but he cannot play Austruther. It is too bad, for he does his best."

"Have you ever heard our western story about the organist, Miss Rigi?" said the reporter. "Ah, no; I have not heard it. Tell me ze story, tell me ze story. I do so like stories," she exclaimed, clasping her hands and preparing to listen. The reporter told her the story of the western church in which the congrega-tion were requested by placard not to shoot the organist as he was doing his best. It pleased the actress immensely. "Zat is it," she exclaimed, "zat is it.

Please do not shoot Anstruther; he is doing hees best. Good, good."
Miss Rigl is evidently a Populist, although she won't admit it. "How can any business expect to do well where ze country'ls in such a condition?" she "Are you interested in politics?" asked "Ah, no; I care nossing for it; I know nossing about it. I am nossing—not even mugwump. I not even sit on ze fence. am not even in favor of equal suffrage.' "But you mustn't say that out loud in Kansas," suggested the Journal man. "Ah, is zat so? Zen I will not. But, ah, America; is it not grand Zey pay such good salaries here." Miss Righ had just been paid her salary. She was called to go on just then and the pleasant chat ended.

COLORADO'S CATTLE INTERESTS.

An Eastern Correspondent Pieks Up Some Interesting Information at Durango. [Special Correspondence.]

DURANGO, Colo., Sept. 13.-I was talking a few days since to a well known cattleman of San Miguel county, who gave me much interesting information regarding the cattle interests of this great state. In San Miguel county, my informant stated, the mode of raising cattle has changed from that of 10 years ago. Instead of depending on range feed the entire year, the cattlemen now prepare feed with which to winter their stock, thereby preventing heavy losses during the winter months. Ranchmen nowadays, as fast as their means will allow, are improving their ranches and getting them into shape to grow alfalfa, the grass best adapted to the soil, which, being wonderfully productive, often yields three crops in one season. Alfalfa is an unknown quantity in the east, but it's a mighty big factor out here in stock and dairy interests. It is a species of clover of vivid emerald averages three tons to the acre and a pasturage besides which will serve until winter. An alfalfa field will subsist horses, cattle and hogs without any other feed. So also will the hay itself. Even hogs that feed exclusively upon the hay will keep fat all winter. Poultry, too, thrives upon the green alfalfa.

Like all clovers, it enriches the soil, and marvelous yields of grain result in rotating after it. A 10 acre field of alfalfa will provide for a team of horses, five to eight milk cows and 50 stock hogs. The value of the alfalfa crop last year was $4,900,000. The honey made from alfalfa is incomparably superior in flavor to any other.

Montrose county is another great cattle region. When the government was feeding the Indians in this county, the interesting discovery was made that the cattle driven in here for the use of the soldiers and Indians began to show a decided improvement in flesh. Investigation demonstrated the fact that the mesa grasses and the yellow stem and redtop of the timber slopes were wonderfully nutritious and fattening. As soon, then, as the reservation was open druggists. to settlement the cattlemen took possession of the ranges. For several years the cattle lived throughout the year on the ranges, but of late they crop the feed so close in the summer that there is little left for winter in the sheltered

So here, as in San Miguel, the cattle men are forced to prepare winter food. This is considered an excellent thing for everybody, as it furnishes a market to the ranchmen for their alfalfa, and they are thus constantly enriching the soil. The cattle thrive all winter, and in the spring the cows are in fine condition to turn out on the range. While the profit to the cattlemen under this system may not be quite so large it is surer than under the old regime.

The country about the Ute reservation between southern Colorado and New Mexico affords the greatest advantages for herding cattle in its alternating ranges and in the divisions which the natural rough features of the country make between these ranges. For years it has sustained large herds of cattle, and the cowboys have driven their herds back and forth across the reservation, which condition of affairs has in itself been a prolific source of trouble between whites and Indians. The proposed reservation for this tribe-lies in the southeastern corner of Utah. There are from 50,000 to 100,000 head of stock here, the property of foreign capitalists, who are zealously fighting the removal of the Utes to this territory.

It would scarcely be fair in this letter to entirely taboo the guardian of the cattle. He is a type peculiar to the country, rollicking, fighting, swaggering, fearing nothing. "It is a free and ensy, happy, demoralizin life," said my friend, the cowboy, to me when we were talking it over. "There are no ties, no restraints. We can do jest as we please, and nobody cares. Sometimes I git tired of it all and think I'll try some other trade, but till ye've tried it ye don't know the pleasure of sleepin in the shadow of the Rockies, on the ground, under the stars," and with a twinkle in his eyes added, "nor the fun of shootin out lights either."

Last year the stock and dairy interests of Colorado amounted to $56,900,-000, and it might easily double that amount, considering its natural advan- Prices for Retailers. tages. Moreover, Colorado promises to become the horse breeding state of the Union. Why? Because of its climatic conditions, its feed and its hills. Let me explain. A perfect horse must possess a lung development that renders the animal impervious to lung diseases and short wind. Colorado's high altitude secures this development. A horse must have feed which will develop bone, muscle and sinew equally. There is a grass growing on the Colorado mesas called gramma grass, which bears a head filled with small seeds, and when ripened retains all its juices in its dried stems and leaves in a condensed form. This is claimed to be the most perfect food yet discovered for the horse. The tills over which the Colorado horse roams insure him absolutely perfect development of hoof and leg. The same conditions apply to sheep rowing. Phuap T. Rankin. growing.

hue and has lovely purple blossoms. It Mr. Bennett's Family Did Not Hear of His Imprisonment.

A dispatch from New Haven, Conn., says that Erasmus Bennett, the well known Topeka horseman, has just been released from the local jall after a week's imprisonment.

Mr. Bennett went east two week ago to collect $80,000 owed him by his eastern agent, Hiram P. Reynolds of Franklinville, N. Y. Reynolds declined to give up the money and had Bennett arrested on a charge of fraud and skipped town. Mr. Bennet was released from jall on bonds furnished by the First National bank of Kansas City, the Merchants' bank of St. Joseph and the Bank of Highland,

Ed Bennett said today that this dispatch was the first intimation he has had of his father's trouble and did not know he was in jail. He knew he went east to make some collections and that this man Rey-nolds was short in his accounts between $20,000 and $25,000, but says he did not know about any counter charge.

The dispatch says Mr. Bennett promises some sensational disclosures against Reynolds in a few days.

TELLS ON THE LYNCHERS.

Sheriff's Son Shows That the Killing of Negroes at Millington Was Deliberate. MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 19.—Robert Mc-Carver, son of Sheriff McCarver, told the story of the lynching of the six alleged incendiaries near Millington, today. He said he was asked to join the mob by Ed Smith, who unfolded the plot to him, stating that Detective Richardson had been employed to arrest the negroes, put them in a wagon and take them into a swamp where the mob would be in wait-

Smith also gave McCarver the names of the men composing the mob and tried to persuade young McCarver to join them but he refused.
